HUMANISM IN THE HEALTH SCIENCES

Humanism in the Health Sciences is an annual WesternU student-edited magazine published since 1996. It was established in an effort to provide a way of showcasing the multitude of talents of the school's students, faculty, and staff. It holds true to the philosophy of WesternU and the role of creating health professionals who are led by intrinsic qualities of science, caring, and humanism.

All submissions will be reviewed and edited by the editorial staff. Submissions should not have been previously published elsewhere and must be the sole creative work of the applying author/s. Although there is no word limit, the editors reserve the right to abridge work if they feel it is too long. This will not be done without the author's consent.
